

Instructions for Immigrant Visa Applicants

Amman, Jordan

Police Certificates: Available to resident Jordanian citizens and foreigners. The General Intelligence Directorate (GID) is responsible for issuing good conduct certificates. They are considered to be reliable, but cover primarily security-related records, i.e. not necessarily criminal information. These certificates must be applied for in person at the local GID office, and are valid for one year. It takes up to two weeks to obtain the certificate from the GID. Foreigners must reside continuously in Jordan for six months before the GID will issue a certificate. There are no procedures to obtain these certificates through Jordanian embassies in foreign countries.

Available to resident Jordanian citizens and foreigners. The General Intelligence Directorate (GID) is responsible for issuing good conduct certificates. They are considered to be reliable, but cover primarily security-related records, i.e. not necessarily criminal information. These certificates must be applied for in person at the local GID office, and are valid for one year. It takes up to two weeks to obtain the certificate from the GID. Foreigners must reside continuously in Jordan for six months before the GID will issue a certificate. There are no procedures to obtain these certificates through Jordanian embassies in foreign countries.

Additional Instructions for Syrian Applicants Processing at Amman, Jordan

Military Records: A “Certificate of Military Service” is issued upon discharge from the military. If this document is lost or unavailable, a new certificate can be obtained from the Mobilization Department responsible for the person’s area of residence at the time of the military service. This new certificate can be obtained in person or through an agent. Military records status are required for all Syrian males over the age of 18. These documents are available to all males. The military status record will indicate whether an applicant served his mandatory service in the Syrian military, is deferred from service in the Syrian military, or is exempted from service in the Syrian military.