

Report on Compliance with The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of

INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION

April 2011

Report to Congress on Compliance with The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction

The U.S. Department of State (“Department”), Office of Children’s Issues (CI), U.S. Central Authority (USCA) under the 1980 Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction (“Convention”), hereby submits, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 11611, this report on Convention compliance, covering the period from October 1, 2009, through December 31, 2010. This represents a change from a fiscal year time period used in prior reports; future reports will follow the calendar year. The USCA is submitting this report to the House Appropriations Committee; the Senate Appropriations Committee; the House Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations and Related Programs; the Senate Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations and Related Programs; the House Foreign Affairs Committee; and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

More detailed information on international parental child abduction (IPCA) appears on CI’s Convention compliance webpage, <http://travel.state.gov/childabduction>. The page includes CI’s reporting methodology, IPCA statistics, and may include other compliance-related information.

Not Compliant with the Convention

COUNTRY	ASSESSMENT
St. Kitts and Nevis	St. Kitts and Nevis was not compliant with the Convention. The USCA forwarded an application under the Convention (“Hague application”) for the return of an abducted child to the St. Kitts Central Authority (SKCA) in November 2009 and re-sent it in February 2010 at the SKCA’s request. The case was then transferred from the SKCA to the attorney general’s office for a legal opinion. Crown Counsel opined that the Convention does not have the force of law in St. Kitts because it has not been incorporated into local laws. The opinion further stated that the welfare of the child outweighed any custodial rights of a parent, thereby suggesting that St. Kitts courts should examine the merits of the custody dispute even in cases arising under the Convention. Such merits determinations are prohibited by Convention Article 16.

St. Kitts and Nevis	During a July meeting about the case with a U.S. Embassy official, an SKCA representative stated that St. Kitts remained committed to the Convention but that IPCA cases would be evaluated on a case-by-case basis to protect Kittitians’ constitutional rights. The representative further stated that St. Kitts law provided no authority to order return in cases where the child is a St. Kitts citizen. Thus, in this case, the Convention could not be applied because the child is a dual national of the United States and St. Kitts. This position runs counter to the well-established principle that the Convention applies equally regardless of the child’s nationality, even when the child has the nationality of the country to which he or she has been taken. The USCA has notified the Permanent Bureau of The Hague Conference on Private International Law (“Hague Permanent Bureau”) about its concerns with respect to St. Kitts.

Patterns of Noncompliance with the Convention

COUNTRY	ASSESSMENT
Bermuda	Bermuda demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the areas of central authority performance and judicial performance. Issues noted: (1) the application of the Convention when the taking party is not a parent; (2) challenges in bringing a Convention case to court when the Central Authority (CA) is also responsible for representing the state in court for child abuse cases, and therefore the CA must potentially advocate that the court apply “best interests of the child” criteria, which are inappropriate for Hague Convention decisions; and (3) some courts’ failure to abide by Article 16 of the Convention, which prohibits consideration of the merits of custody in domestic proceedings while a Hague application is pending. In one recent case, the Bermudan Central Authority (BCA) initially informed the USCA that since the taking person was not a parent, but an aunt, the Convention would not apply. The BCA agreed to change this policy after holding discussions with the USCA in June 2010. Meanwhile, the family court held custody hearings in the case. The USCA and U.S. Embassy reminded the BCA that per Article 16, custody hearings should not proceed until the case under the Convention (“Convention case” or “Hague case”) is resolved. The court subsequently proceeded with a custody hearing and granted the taking aunt “full care, control and custody” of the child despite the pending Hague application. In November 2010, Bermuda appointed a new attorney general who has expressed his commitment to ensuring that Bermuda is compliant with the Convention. At his urging, the court in the above case scheduled a hearing on the Hague application, but the left-behind parent (LBP) withdrew the application just days before the hearing, citing a lack of legal representation and a voluntary agreement with the taking aunt.

Brazil

Brazil demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the area of judicial performance, mainly because of continued judicial delays in case processing and in basing decisions in Hague cases on criteria not contemplated by the Convention. Six longstanding cases involving eight children encountered repeated delays in the judiciary and still remain unresolved. In the six cases, trial-level federal courts granted or denied return under the Convention, but all remained in appeal proceedings.

Overall, however, Brazil demonstrated significant improvement in fulfilling its obligations under the Convention. Federal courts ordered the return of three children in longstanding cases, although appeals of the return orders are pending in two of these. In late 2009, Brazil's highest court, the Supreme Federal Tribunal (STF), allowed the enforcement of a return order in one longstanding, highly publicized case despite pending appeals, and the child was soon thereafter returned to the United States. In addition to initiatives undertaken last year by the Brazilian Central Authority (BCA) and the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) to improve compliance with the Convention, the OAG intensified its coordination with the judiciary. The BCA reports that the STF's 2007 consolidation of Convention cases in the federal courts and its 2008 directive that Convention cases be given high priority should enable the courts to handle these cases more expeditiously.

Over the course of 2010, the United States and Brazil held productive bilateral meetings, and the BCA, OAG, and STF organized a multinational conference on IPCA in Brasilia. The conference helped facilitate judicial education and explored the potential introduction of legislation that could speed the processing of Convention cases in Brazilian federal courts.

Bulgaria

Bulgaria demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the areas of law enforcement and judicial performance. The USCA and U.S. Embassy Sofia have worked closely with Bulgarian authorities to address compliance concerns noted in last year's report. The Bulgarian Ministry of Justice (BMOJ), the Bulgarian Central Authority (BCA), and the City Court of Sofia have been communicative and responsive to inquiries about Bulgaria's application of the Convention. While Bulgarian judges have issued orders for the return of children under the Convention, procedures often involve significant delays because of judicial requirements to review social reports. Delays are also caused by domestic child custody laws that appear to permit introduction of new evidence at any point during the proceedings and to allow cases to be repeatedly continued if the taking parent (TP) elects not to appear in court.

During a September 2010 judicial seminar, Bulgarian judges reported they lack authority to enforce Convention return orders and to write return orders that include any protective measures or specific instructions for the return. Enforcement of civil orders in Bulgaria is conducted by public enforcement agents, who have demonstrated reluctance to take action on return orders if either the TP or child is not fully cooperative. Private enforcement agents are available, but they may decline requests and appear not to be monitored by any government or judicial authority. Consequently, return orders may essentially be useless given the absence of legal and administrative enforcement obligations.

Bulgaria	The BMOJ has appointed a Bulgarian judge to the International Hague Network of Judges, which will provide increased opportunities for training and dialogue about Convention best practices. Amending aspects of Bulgarian domestic law that are incompatible with or present challenges to Convention implementation is also under consideration.
Burkina Faso	Burkina Faso demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the area of central authority performance. The Burkinabe Central Authority's (BCA) lack of resources, accessibility, and understanding of its treaty obligations delays the resolution of cases. Basic communication was extremely difficult. The Burkinabe Ministry of Social Action (BMSA), which houses the BCA, does not have a centralized e-mail system or widespread internet access, and the unreliable telephone infrastructure in Burkina Faso rendered direct phone and fax communication impossible. In follow-up conversations with U.S. Embassy Ouagadougou officials, the BCA outlined procedures for submitting new Hague cases that would generate significant delays as a case moves slowly through intermediaries and other bureaucratic hurdles. Without specific legislation to implement the Convention, local laws and customs are given precedence over Convention principles. The infrequency of IPCA cases relegates them to a relatively low priority. The BMSA is in the process of writing a manual that will describe BCA procedures in IPCA cases. The BCA has also expressed interest in bilateral training on the handling of Convention cases.
Honduras	Honduras demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the areas of judicial and law enforcement performance. The USCA notes that communication with the Honduran Central Authority (HCA) improved, and the HCA is making significant progress toward meeting its obligations under the Convention. The HCA's recent responsiveness demonstrates that its new leadership takes its responsibilities seriously. The HCA appears to be monitoring case progress within the judiciary and is regularly providing the USCA with updates. In October 2010, the HCA took a significant step in strengthening its authority by filing a motion for reconsideration and appeal in a case where the court had denied the return of the child in September 2010. The court agreed to accept the motions for reconsideration and appeal after the filing deadline because it had neglected to timely inform the HCA, the LBP, or the USCA of its decision. Other notable improvements within the HCA include its filing a written request for a prompt ruling on a longstanding case, the proactive facilitation of two voluntary returns, and assistance in coordinating another. Although the HCA made progress, the judicial system and law enforcement authorities still face inherent institutional obstacles in processing Hague applications. Judicial delays are a factor in the two longstanding cases which have been pending for two years and seven years, respectively. (These cases are discussed below under "Unresolved Return Applications.") Additionally, some courts continue to consider the merits of custody during Hague cases, notwithstanding Article 16, and request psychological and home studies as a routine part of the judicial process. Recent training by the Latin America liaison officer of The Hague Permanent Bureau and a videoconference with a U.S. Hague network judge sought to address these shortcomings. The training was well received by the 30 judges involved. At last

Honduras	report, Honduras is in the process of appointing two of its own judges to The Hague Network of Judges. The USCA understands that law enforcement continues to be underfunded and appears to have difficulty providing support to the HCA and the judicial system. Resources outside of the capital seem limited, and the HCA reports that it is often difficult to ascertain the exact location of children who are the subjects of cases. These problems lengthen the time between the HCA’s receipt of an application and the service of court papers to TPs. As noted in past reports, Honduras has yet to pass implementing legislation, which could help it to meet its Convention obligations. The Honduran Congress introduced legislation in 2007 and again in 2009, but it did not pass. At the end of 2010, there appeared to be no new bill on the table.
Mexico	Mexico demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the areas of law enforcement and judicial performance. The USCA has, however, noted marked improvement in Mexican Central Authority (MCA) performance. Communication with the MCA has improved significantly. The MCA increased the frequency of its meetings and information exchange with the USCA and U.S. Embassy Mexico City. It has put a great deal of effort into effective case management and in addressing the judicial and law enforcement issues noted under “Unresolved Return Applications” below, making progress in both of these areas. With respect to law enforcement performance, the MCA is working with the Agencia Federal de Investigación (AFI) to search more actively for missing children. As a result of this effort, several missing children in longstanding cases have been located. In regard to judicial performance, the MCA is developing online judicial training modules and has worked with individual judges on difficult cases. The MCA has also indicated it will work on legislative initiatives to limit the use of amparos, discussed below, in Hague cases. Despite these improvements, Mexican courts continue to apply the Convention’s legal requirements inconsistently and suffer from delays in processing return applications under the Convention. Some courts, especially in certain jurisdictions, continue to adjudicate the merits of custody in Hague cases, notwithstanding Article 16. Unreasonable delays in case processing are often related to the “amparo,” a constitutionally based appeal. A TP can file an amparo, or multiple amparos, with a federal court alleging that Convention procedures, decisions, or administrative actions in the case violate the TP’s constitutional rights. In response, the courts issue provisional orders freezing proceedings under the Convention pending a final adjudication of the amparo. It is encouraging that some state and district initiatives have created a cadre of trained judges to hear Convention cases. Also of note are improvements in the quality and speed of decisions following completion of judicial training related to the Convention. Although the USCA has observed some progress, Mexican law enforcement historically has a low rate of success in locating children who have been abducted to, or wrongfully retained in, Mexico. The majority of the longstanding unresolved return applications in Mexico remain pending because of an inability on the part of law enforcement to locate

Mexico	missing children. Two main factors appear to contribute to this problem: (1) insufficient resources dedicated to locating these children; and (2) an apparent lower priority given to IPCA cases compared to other criminal activity.
The Bahamas	The Bahamas demonstrated patterns of noncompliance in the area of central authority performance. Of the four cases of children abducted from the United States to The Bahamas that the USCA is handling, one case was postponed for 14 months after the initial court date, with a second hearing scheduled for January 2011. The other three cases have not yet been forwarded to the court. One of these had been pending for 16 months as of December 2010. The USCA experienced extreme difficulty in contacting the Bahamian Central Authority (BCA) during much of 2010, when communication was limited and sporadic. Recently, a new point of contact at the BCA was established, which should lead to better communication. Judicial performance improved substantially during 2010, resulting in the return of a child to the United States in October. The attorney general's office began an effort this year to educate Bahamian judges about obligations under the Convention with respect to expeditious case processing. This effort appears effective, and the USCA is optimistic that such communication could be helpful in future cases.

Efforts to Encourage Other Countries to Join the Convention

Many of the IPCA cases handled by the USCA involve abductions to countries not yet parties to the Convention. As the Convention provides the most effective way to facilitate the prompt return of abducted children to their country of habitual residence and help deter abduction, encouraging countries to join it is a high priority.

In July 2010, Secretary of State Clinton created a new foreign policy position to address IPCA, as well as intercountry adoption, and appointed Ambassador Susan Jacobs the first Special Advisor for Children's Issues. In this capacity, Ambassador Jacobs has actively engaged foreign government officials to protect the welfare and interests of children. In October 2010, she hosted a meeting for Washington Chiefs of Mission from Asian countries – including Bangladesh, China, Japan, Laos, Nepal, the Philippines, Singapore, South Korea, and Timor-Leste – to discuss the Convention, to brief them on what to expect from the United States as a treaty partner, and to encourage them to become parties. Fiji and Thailand, parties whose accession the United States has yet to accept under Convention Article 38, also attended and expressed interest in working closely with U.S. officials to improve implementation and garner U.S. acceptance under Article 38. Hans van Loon, the Secretary General of The Hague Permanent Bureau, pointed out that accession would place these countries more prominently on the world stage.

The Department regularly instructs its diplomatic missions in non-Convention countries to approach host governments and encourage them to join the Convention. Consular Affairs Assistant Secretary Janice L. Jacobs and other U.S. government officials frequently raise the Convention in discussions with senior officials from these countries. During the reporting period, USCA representatives met with officials from the following countries to discuss IPCA and joining the Convention: Armenia, India, Japan, the Philippines, Russia, Saudi Arabia, South Korea, and Zambia.

USCA officials also met with representatives from a number of Convention partners to discuss its practical application, including Argentina, Australia, Bermuda, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Slovakia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The Bahamas, Turkey, and Uruguay.

The USCA participates in regular meetings with its Latin American partners and works with The Hague Permanent Bureau to improve the Convention's operation in Central and South America. The USCA has also worked closely with the International Hague Network of Judges, especially the four U.S. judges, to promote direct communication among judges in international family law cases.

Efforts to Encourage Convention Parties to Facilitate Work of Nongovernmental Organizations

The USCA makes continual efforts to encourage the parties to the Convention to facilitate the work of nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) within their countries that assist parents seeking the return of children under the Convention. The Department encourages Convention partners to utilize the services and expertise of local NGOs to implement the Convention more effectively, particularly in countries developing or expanding their capacity. U.S. diplomatic missions abroad have developed lists of NGOs in their country or region to assist families in the difficult circumstances surrounding child abductions.

The USCA also works with a number of international and U.S. NGOs to assist families affected by IPCA and facilitate contact with and return of abducted children. A description of this work appears on CI's Convention compliance webpage, www.travel.state.gov/childabduction.

Countries with Enforcement Concerns

Below is a list of countries that are parties to the Convention in which LBPs in the United States have not been able to secure prompt enforcement of a final return or access order during the reporting period. This includes an order resulting from a Hague proceeding; a U.S. custody, access or visitation order; or an access or visitation order by authorities in the country concerned, where the lack of enforcement is because of the absence of prompt and effective enforcement mechanisms, the lack of recognition of comity, or other factors.

COUNTRY	ENFORCEMENT CONCERN
Argentina	Hague return order not enforced.
Australia	Hague access order not enforced.
Austria	Foreign court order for access not enforced.
Costa Rica	Hague return order not enforced.
France	Hague return order not enforced.
Germany	Hague return order not enforced.
Honduras	Hague return order not enforced.
Hungary	Foreign court order for access not enforced.
Israel	Hague return order not enforced.
Mexico	Hague return order not enforced.
Romania	Hague return order not enforced.
South Africa	Foreign court order for access not enforced.
Spain	U.S. custody order not enforced.
Switzerland	Hague access order not enforced.
Turkey	Hague return order not enforced.

Unresolved Return Applications

As of December 31, 2010, the USCA had 114 applications for return that remained open and active 18 months after the date of filing with the relevant foreign central authority in the 18 countries listed below. The following section describes each unresolved case and the actions taken by the USCA to resolve them.

NOTE: Foreign central authorities are referred to below as “CA,” preceded by the initial of the country, e.g., “MCA” for the Mexican Central Authority.

COUNTRY/ CASE	ABDUCTED OR RETAINED	APP. FILED	CHILD LOCATED	SUMMARY OF CASE
ARGENTINA Case 1	6-2008	6-2009	YES	The court held the first Convention hearing in November 2009. In April 2010, the court accepted the TP’s proposal for a psychological evaluation of the children. In August 2010, the court domesticated a U.S. court order that awarded the LBP sole legal and physical custody of the children. The TP immediately filed an appeal. A decision from the appeals court is expected in 2011.
ARGENTINA Case 2	8-2008	4-2009	YES	The court held the first Convention hearing in August 2009. On December 10, 2009, the ACA informed the USCA that the judge interviewed the child, who requested to stay in Argentina. The court withheld a Hague ruling until the LBP responds to domestic violence allegations. On January 27, 2010, the USCA informed the LBP that the court had requested additional documentation from the LBP. On May 7, 2010, the ACA informed the USCA that the court requested personal testimony from the child. Subsequent updates yielded no new information on the case.
ARGENTINA Case 3	1-2009	4-2009	YES	The Argentine court ordered the return of the child under the Convention in November 2009. On May 28, 2010, the court of appeals rejected the TP’s appeal and ordered the return of the child to the United States. The Argentine Supreme Court upheld the return order on December 21, 2010, but the child had not traveled by December 31.

BELGIUM Case 1	10-2008	1-2009	YES	The BCA took more than six months to appoint an attorney to present the Convention application to the court. The LBP is currently appealing the court's March 2010 denial of return based on Article 13(b) of the Convention ("grave risk" of harm to the child). By December 2010 the court had not ruled.
BRAZIL Case 1	9-2004	1-2005	YES	In June 2007, a Brazilian federal court ordered the child returned under the Convention. The TP filed an appeal and then obtained temporary custody from a different federal court. In September 2008, the appellate court vacated the return order, finding that the child had become settled in Brazil. In August 2009, a state court in a separate custody proceeding ordered the parties to reach an agreement on a visitation schedule for the LBP before issuing a custody ruling; the parties were unable to reach an agreement. In May 2010, the state court granted custody to the TP. In May 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that a special appeal in the Hague case, which remained pending, had been filed by the OAG before the Superior Court of Justice and that the OAG planned to meet with the Court to discuss an expeditious resolution. The BCA explained that a federal court ruling ordering the return of the child in the Hague case would supersede the state court custody ruling. As of December 2010, however, no further action had been taken on the case.
BRAZIL Case 2	7-2006	11-2006	YES	In April 2008, the court ordered the return of the child under the Convention, but the TP absconded with the child. In May 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that the TP had filed an appeal, that the Superior Court of Justice had granted a suspension of the lower court's decision, and that the OAG planned to file an appeal against the suspension. In September 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that this appeal is now pending in the federal court. The USCA and BCA are assisting the LBP to petition for access rights while the appeal is pending.
BRAZIL Case 3	2-2009	3-2009	YES	The Convention case was filed in federal court in October 2009. In April 2010, the LBP attended the first hearing and was granted visitation with the child under the supervision of a court-appointed psychologist. In September 2010, the federal court ordered the return of the child, but held that the child had to first spend a 15-day adaptation period with the LBP in Brazil. Later that month, the TP appealed the lower court's decision, and the LBP's 15-day adaptation period was suspended; it was reinstated in October 2010. The OAG planned to prepare counterarguments to the federal appeals court. Meanwhile, the LBP requested that U.S. Consulate General São Paulo visit the child, which it did in October 2010.

BRAZIL Case 4	12-2004	2-2005	YES	In February 2009, the LBP informed the USCA of a September 2008 federal court order denying the return of the child under the Convention. In March 2009, the BCA agreed to request temporary visitation rights for the LBP while the OAG appealed the decision to the federal appeals court. This appeal is currently before the federal appeals court pending a final ruling. In March 2010, the BCA coordinator met with the court to discuss delays in the case. In September 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that the court had granted the LBP temporary access rights. The LBP visited the child in Brazil in September 2010.
BRAZIL Case 5	12-2007	2-2008	YES	In August 2009, a federal court issued a Convention return order for the children, and the TP appealed. In February 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that the federal appeals court had requested information regarding the LBP's immigration status in the United States, which the LBP's U.S. lawyer provided in March 2010. In April 2010, the LBP participated in a court hearing via digital video conference and was advised that the appeals court had decided to return the case to the lower court for further findings of fact. In May 2010, the BCA informed the USCA that the lower court had requested a psychological evaluation of the children. The lower court returned the case to the federal appeals court, and it is now pending a final ruling.
BRAZIL Case 6	6-2006	10-2006	YES	The court held hearings in September 2007 and March 2008, ordered psychological evaluations for the children, and then heard the parties' closing arguments. In October 2009, the BCA informed the USCA that the OAG had requested the court to expedite the case. In February 2010, the court denied the return of the children to the United States on the ground that they had adapted to their new residence. On April 23, the OAG filed an appeal. The case is now pending a hearing with the federal appeals court.
CANADA Case 1	12-2005	11-2008	YES	In September 2009, the court expressed concern that it could not issue a return order under the Convention since the TP and child had already been ordered removed from Canada to Zimbabwe for Canadian immigration violations. The TP was later granted resident status in Canada and remained there. In April 2010, the court suspended the Convention proceedings while the TP and LBP engaged in settlement discussions. These discussions continue.
CANADA Case 2	12-2006	10-2008	YES	After a delay while the LBP retained legal counsel, the first hearing was held in June 2009. At this hearing, the court did not issue a ruling, as it was concerned that the Convention did not apply to this case. The court has still not issued a ruling, and the case remains unresolved.

CANADA Case 3	10-2008	4-2009	YES	In July 2009, a family court in Canada granted custody to the TP. Despite this order, the Hague case continued, and the court ordered the LBP to pay thousands of dollars in legal costs for claims the LBP made that were deemed to be without merit. The court then ruled that it would not set a hearing on the Convention petition until these costs are paid. In November 2010, the court reaffirmed its decision and once again declined to hear the return application until the LBP paid the required costs.
COLOMBIA Case 1	7-2007	3-2008	YES	The first hearing on the Convention application took place in July 2009. In September 2009, the court submitted what it referred to as “letters rogatory” for more information from the LBP. The USCA advised the CCA that the LBP could not give responses under oath to questions that are outside the scope and purpose of the Convention, and that the letters rogatory were improperly submitted according to diplomatic procedures. The CCA stated that although the case had been delayed because the LBP did not answer the court’s questions, the court is now ready to move on the case without the LBP’s response. The CCA expects a final ruling from the court soon. A hearing was scheduled for late January 2011.
COLOMBIA Case 2	8-2008	1-2009	YES	The USCA was informed by the CCA in May 2009 that the TP agreed to return the child voluntarily. The case stalled when the TP refused to allow the child to return to the United States without her, but the TP would not apply to travel with the child. Mediation hearings were held in February and March 2010, but the TP refused to return the child. The CCA informed the USCA that since an agreement was not reached by the parents, the return application will now be considered by the court. The next court hearing is scheduled for February 2011.
COSTA RICA Case 1	10-2008	1-2009	NO	This case has not reached Costa Rican courts because the child and TP have not been located. Costa Rican authorities have been unable to verify whether the TP and child are in the country.
ECUADOR Case 1	10-2007	3-2008	YES	In February 2010, the court denied the child’s return under the Convention. The LBP appealed, and a hearing was held in June 2010. In August 2010, the appeals court affirmed the denial of return. Both the lower and appellate courts found that the child had become “settled” in the new environment under Article 12 of the Convention and cited the incorrect wrongful retention date of December 2006 rather than the correct date of October 2007. This incorrect date was then used in the judicial decision to calculate the time between the wrongful retention and the filing of the return application. The LBP’s lawyer confirmed that the correct date

ECUADOR Case 1				of wrongful retention was presented during the hearings, and he argued to the court that the LBP filed within seven months of the wrongful retention based on the correct filing date. The lawyer filed a second appeal in September 2010.
FRANCE Case 1	8-2006	2-2008	YES	The French court's Convention return order of December 2008 was overturned on appeal in July 2009. The LBP filed a further appeal to the French Court of Cassation, which is still considering the appeal.
FRANCE Case 2	11-2007	3-2008	YES	Successive General Prosecutors have made little effort to enforce the October 2008 Convention return order. The TP filed an appeal with the Court of Cassation in August 2010. The USCA and U.S. Embassy Paris continually press the French Ministry of Justice to enforce the order and in the meantime to facilitate more access for the LBP to the children.
GREECE Case 1	10-2005	11-2006	YES	The initial hearing on the Convention application took place in March 2007. In October 2007, the LBP appealed the court's decision to deny return based on Article 13(b) and the children's preference to remain in Greece. The appeal hearing was officially delayed twice before the LBP chose to open a separate case in Greek family court, where his U.S. custody order was recognized. The TP appealed the Greek family court's decision, and the case went before the Greek Supreme Court in October 2010. The Supreme Court has not yet issued a ruling. Meanwhile, the LBP's first appeal of the lower court's decision has not been heard.
HONDURAS Case 1	8-2008	11-2008	YES	In February 2009, the HCA informed the USCA that the TP had refused to resolve the case voluntarily. In July 2010, the HCA notified the USCA that it had not followed up on the case because it did not have a legal representative in the city in Honduras where the case is located. In October 2010, an associate from the HCA traveled to that city with a new legal representative and reviewed the court file, asking the court for a final ruling on the Convention application. That ruling is still pending.
HONDURAS Case 2	7-2003	9-2003	NO	In May 2006, a court ordered the children's return under the Convention. Because the LBP is a Brazilian citizen, the USCA worked with the Brazilian Embassy in Honduras to arrange escorts and the temporary transfer of custody to the children's uncle, the LBP's brother. Instead, the court temporarily transferred custody to the TP's brother. The court then ordered a social study of the children. In July 2007, the appeals court overturned the return order. The children disappeared with the TP in March 2008, and their location remains

HONDURAS Case 1				unknown. In March 2010, the HCA informed the USCA that the court would try to locate the children to perform the court-ordered social study.
ISRAEL Case 1	4-1997	10-1997	NO	In November 1998, a court ordered the children returned under the Convention. Because Israeli police have been unable to locate the TP and children, the return order remains unenforced. The parents, without disclosing the TP's whereabouts, attempted a voluntary agreement for visitation in 2007. However, the TP ceased all communication before it could be finalized.
